

Complete Your Basement Bar Idea

Having a basement bar idea and developing it is one of the best home improvement projects a homeowner can come up with. When you have lots of friends coming over especially on weekends, a basement bar right in your home would be useful. Even for just the simple joy of hanging out, the basement is a perfect spot.

It makes a basement specially pleasant to hang out in if you know your friends enjoy the room too. Having a very good basement bar idea is one thing that gives you that sense of fulfillment. The conversation doesn't seem to end. Here are some things you need to set it up.

1. Sink. Remember to keep your sink in a corner where it's near the plumbing system. This will make it easier to install. Since all ends of the plumbing system in your house leads to the basement, might as well set up your mini bar there. Your wet bar is where you wash stuff or drain all excessive spills into the sink.
2. Liquor shelves. Having a liquor shelf in your basement bar is essential since you'll be serving drinks in the room. Place your liquor shelf in an area where the temperature is consistent. This will help as most of the wine and other liquor types are temperature regulated. A basement bar idea can never be complete without this.
3. Keg, cooler, and a refrigerator. If you hope to serve beer, you might want to put in a beer keg shelf below your bar. It's safe and it's easy to manage. Some bar units have a built-in keg cabinet. An alternative to the beer keg is a cooler to put your beer bottles in. However, coolers can also be messy after the party. If you don't like coolers or keg, put a mini ref in your basement bar. But these are also must haves for a basement bar.
4. The bar. Obviously, a basement bar can't be without the bar! You have a choice of building your own. Some carpentry skills and a little time in your weekend schedule is what you basically need. This is most practical when your budget is tight. However, if cash is not a concern, buy one. There are a lot of different types of bars that suits your basement bar idea to choose from.
5. A bartender. Add an experienced bartender to your basement bar. However, this can add to your overhead cost. If you have a friend who knows how to mix concoctions, send him in. But if you don't, the next best option is to study this art of mixing drinks. The fun part is when the party begins. Having this in your plan completes your basement bar idea.

Many basement bars don't even look like a basement at all. The designs are so good you might think it's a bar in a hotel restaurant. The point is that all you need is a good and clear vision of how your bar should look like. Your basement bar idea is your key to make it happen. When it's done you'll be the envy of your friends and neighborhood.
