

Omaha high-low poker tips for beginner

Omaha for beginner could mean to concentrate more right from the pre-flop. As a rule it is not advisable to play loose bets in Omaha high/low without any nuts regardless of a beginner player or advanced player. Playing better and disciplined right from the pre-flop could be a best approach in Omaha for beginner category.

Some tips that can help with high-low in Omaha for beginner standards would be:-

- Never to play medium hands, because you can never make any nuts with medium hands.
- Do not get carried away by a medium straight, they are not better or blissful, they can be easily bet by someone who can have a nut. Especially a 5-6-7-8 can let you make a nut straight, but can let you loose the low! However, a middle low like T-J-Q-K is likely playable and can sometimes let you form a full house if some possibility for making a pair to make a full house shows up in the community cards.
- A-A-X-X should be thrown to fold than to draw. If you do not see any chances for flush better fold in the flop than to wait.
- For a starting hand with 2-3-4-5 you can expect to form a wheel in the community card, but if unfortunately no Ace comes up in the flop better fold.
- Alternatively in a 2-3-4-5 hand without an Ace in the flop can be played ahead for a straight or a full house if the community cards are 4-5-10 in the flop.

Omaha for beginner need not be without bluffing; in fact you need to start practicing bluffing at some stages. It is better to bluff only in short-handed Omaha high low games, bluffing in full-handed games requires lot of experience and odds mathematics and may not suit in an Omaha for beginner game.

- If you are going to come across a flop with 10-9-3 in a short-handed game you can raise a bet with A-3-7-8. Though you do not have any real card, your opponent would have placed a bet against you thinking you have a low cards considering an A-10. Now, if you are going to raise he may get confused and may give up especially he is a tight player.

Omaha for beginner can need lot of homework and there are several strategies and approaches to be mastered in Omaha high/low games in terms of psychology of the player and tells of bets, raise and re-raises. In Omaha high/low games you need to look and estimate the reason behind a raise and a re-raise before you decide your next approach.

A good memory is essential for Omaha for beginner games especially in Omaha high/low you need to have enough memory to form a mental map of your opponent hands!

About the Author

Jack Randell is an old player who wants to teach you what is Omaha high low and give you some poker tips for beginner.

Source: <http://www.diyresource.com>