

A career in computer games

Did you know that playing fun games on your personal computer could also put you on the road to an exciting career? For a job that is as fast-paced as your racing games online, go for creating and testing computer games. There are thousands of good computer games online for the gaming addict. While computer games have always been the patrons of education and entertainment, they are now a way to earn big bucks as well!

On your way to gaming addiction

There are some people who just can't help but love computer games. They go and download free games whenever they see one. Winning one game is an impetus for trying a hand at the next. Download free games and play more exciting games online; that seems to be the craze for these game addicts. Many of these gaming enthusiasts are actually blessed with sound logical reasoning, sharpened game after game. If you are one of those people who live for games like oxygen, then you might as well spread the fever by designing better games for others like you to play.

If you don't get the programming jargon, then you could at least play games and detect any possible bugs that could be fixed. Your input would be invaluable to the designers and you could get payment to play some really cool new games online, even before they are open for the public!

Design games

There are tons of opportunities for programmers to create games. There are different categories like maze games, races, treasure hunt and others that require you to build teams or armies and command your forces. Everything from the basic flash to various different scripts and algorithms are used to code these fun games. It is not too difficult to master the basics and you could start off by designing small games. As you build up your programming knowledge, you could use your gaming experience to create new fun games for the people.

Test games

With a little creative thinking and some logical reasoning, you could spot so many bugs in newly designed games. Your inputs could get you money. In addition to winning goodies for winning games, you can earn money just by playing games and giving some feedback! You can download free games from the designers to play them many times and analyze some particular working of the game. Of course, not everyone who plays games is capable of analyzing the entire working. But yes, gaming addicts are definitely better placed than others because they have the experience needed to be an expert observer. Such people can spot minor flaws that are hindering the game.

The pay

Your earnings depend on how much you work and whom you work for and the extent of analysis or coding you do. Some dedicated gaming portals call for designers and testing gamers. You could earn anywhere from 20 dollars to a hundred in an hour. If that sounds like good cash for a freelancer who works for a few hours a day, imagine the pay for a full-time gaming professional! This is a highly growing field with great demand for high class professionals who can provide top class infotainment games for all.

About the Author

Mike Rotolo is a gaming industry veteran and an expert to everything related to games online

Source: <http://www.diyresource.com>