

Creative Ideas For Desert Landscaping

This article tells you how to convert a desert like backyard into a better looking place

Most of us would like to have a good looking backyard that neighbors would envy. However, there are some occasions when the backyard is full of sand and borders and the chances of growing grass is a limited option. In these cases, we feel rejected and though not know what to do. There is no reason to worry though if one is ready to look at other options to beautify that backyard. You can always have some artificial things that can be added to the backyard. So that it can be a comfortable domain for your guests.

How to design it?

Start looking at what you'd really want that backyard, other than plants. As plants cannot go in that region even have the substituted with artificial objects. These would be anything like props or small statues that can beautify the place. It is not a very difficult task. Most of the times we fail as we cannot think of new ideas and so the whole project goes for a toss. For inspiration, you should look and read through magazines and check the pictures. These are good sources of information. Even professionals sometimes use these resources to get ideas. While you're doing this, you also need to understand the budget that you have for the whole project.

Since greenery is out of question, you need to get other options. You can think of coloring the rocks for a change. These would look good if the rocks are in various sizes. You can also think of plants that grow in the deserts as an option.

On the other hand, you can also add artificial turf and make the area look green. Once you have done this. You can take the artificial objects and props and scatter it around to fill the place. It should not look empty.

Let there be water.

You can even place a fountain at the side of your backyard so that the guests get the feeling of water flowing in the backyard. This can be a very soothing experience for everybody. In fact, if you are relaxing than that sound of water trickling can really add to the purpose. The bigger the fountain the better it is. At another level, you can even think of adding a swimming pool to your backyard. Make sure you have the fence for privacy purposes. It would definitely be a very entertaining experience.

Bring in the lights.

Lighting is very important in your landscaping and gardening. How you place the lights and at what points you place the lights is very important. It acts to the overall ambience, and it can make or break the look of your backyard. Therefore, be really careful where you place the lights. You can use direct or indirect lighting depending on your choice and the facilities available.

These smaller bits will definitely help you to build your backyard. If this is not enough then you should look at magazines and other sources of information or ideas on how to go about doing your backyard design. You will definitely get ideas to convert a desert into a green lawn. Good luck!

About the Author

Andrew Caxton is the consultant for <http://www.lawn-mowers-and-garden-tractors.com>. A website with tips on landscaping, amongst many related topics.

Source: <http://www.diyresource.com>