

Artistic Wrought Iron Weathervanes That Fly Against The Wind

A beautiful wrought iron weathervane is not only functional, but also decorative. Initially they were designed to determine the direction of the wind. But even though such a need is no longer necessary, wrought iron windvanes make a handsome addition to any yard and home.

Farmers hold the wrought iron weather vane in very high honor. Years ago, men understood that knowing the winds pattern was as good as knowing, its direction. Many farmers depended upon a wrought iron weather vane for their livelihood. Most often, the wind vane sat upon the rooftop of the outhouse. Naturally, as the years have come and gone the commonly used wrought iron wind vane has found new creative and trendy purposes.

Wrought iron weather vanes or wind vanes feature exceptional versatility when selecting an area for home display. Most often wrought iron weather vanes are available in a sleek black finish, while designed to appear as antiques. Since Wrought iron does not corrode, it is durable and makes an eye-catching statement.

For some people an antique looking wrought iron wind vane simply does not match their contemporary decor. This is not necessarily so. As the wind vane increases in popularity more and more styles are available. There is a wrought iron weather vane for any decor preference.

Wrought iron weathervanes are wonderful little accents to your deck or table top. Today you are able to find wrought iron weathervanes in many different models. Imagine having a whimsical little wrought iron weathervane gracing your dining table. Don't feel like climbing up on to the roof, there are weather vanes for the fence. Perhaps you need to find your own version of the most popular weathervane.

The most popular weathervane and one that we have all seen is of course the rooster weathervane. These are also known by a few other names such as the roof cockerels or weather cocks. What ever name you know them by, they are not limited to the top of your roof anymore. You can literally place a wrought iron weather vane where ever you feel it should go.

An interesting little factoid for you, the rooster became popular because the Pope proclaimed that in honor of the apostle Peter every church should have a rooster on their rooftops as weathervanes. This was to remind followers to live a life of peace and harmony.

Wrought iron artists today create some of the most beautiful weather vanes, thanks to new technology. Many new forms of wrought iron wind vanes are fashioned daily as well as those models, which have stood the test of time and winds. Some wrought iron weather vane artists are able to make a five-figure income on one piece of their designed masterpieces. Just think of how amazing a wrought iron weather vane will look on your property, as even a rooster wind vane can make such an impression on you, your family and friends as well as your neighbors.
