

Try Camping For A Memorable Family Vacation

Thoughts about camping vary from person to person as camping is not everyone's idea of a fun time. However, a family camping trip can be an unforgettable vacation if you are willing to try it. Yes, the family will be living in close quarters during the entire trip but it is far different than living closely at home.

There are many sizes and styles of tents available, from single room tents to multi-room tents. Some can sleep anywhere from six to eight people while others can only comfortably sleep one or two. Multi-room style tents have dividers providing some amount of privacy, which some family members may very much appreciate. Peace and quiet is often a challenge to find when living so closely. Two smaller tents rather than one large tent may even be the best choice in tents, allowing family members to have separate sleeping quarters. Remember, a tent you might use in the mountains of bavaria will not be the same tent you use in the summer at the Grand Canyon!

Regardless of the sleeping arrangements you choose, a family camping vacation can surely be an experience everyone will remember. Be sure to bring your camera or camcorder to capture all the memories and, of course, do not forget extra film, batteries or your digital memory cards. Of course, be sure to keep your valuables safe and locked away in our car when not in use.

Being prepared is an important part of a successful and enjoyable camping trip. Camping can be a great time, but it can also have its stressful moments especially after a long trip to the campground. During a family camping trip, it is probably okay to relax a little compared to structure maintained at home. For instance, letting the kids stay up later may work well during this special time. You can stay up later singing by the campfire or roasting marshmallows.

One of the benefits of family camping trips is the fresh air you and your family will get. Take advantage of this time and plan activities and day trips such as light hiking, cycling and exploring the area. Pack up the family backpacks and head out as a family for some fresh air, exercise and time together. You may find some interesting sites along the way to add to the general camping experience.

If your children are old enough to venture out on their own, be sure you have some way to contact them. Walkie-talkies or mobile phones are the best way to keep in touch and is essential for purposes of any emergency that may occur.

Simply put, family camping trips should be an enjoyable, fun and stress-free time for the entire family. A little privacy, freedom and activities of interest can definitely help make this a vacation to remember!
